NUMBER TWO.

Taking up the topic of our last week's article we quote again from Genl. Vial's very able paper on the neglect of drainage and its dire consequences.

Take for illustration the following description of a portion of the city of Salem, from this year's report of the Massachusetts State Board of Health. Speaking of the location of a very large number of cases of typhoid fever, the report states: "At the foot of Plingre-street is a sluggish body of water, foisted by refuse of all descriptions, which taints the air of the neighborhood with its oppressive exhalations. Near this water, on low land are tenements whose occupants use little precaution to protect themselves from the stench of slops and garbage thrown on the surface of the ground, or from shallow and neglected privies. At high tide the waters find their way along the drain into the cellars of the houses. It is surely not strange that in this neighborhood, during the past year, occurred nineteen cases of typhoid fever."

Again there is a sluggish basin of water lying at the north of Howard street cemetery and the jail (in proximity). It covers three or more acres of flats. Into it flows the drainage from St. Peter's street, Howard street, Oliver street, North street, also the drainage from the gas works. In the two houses immediately bordering the water there have been four cases of typhoid fever this season. Half way up the court have occurred two more, and not far from the head of the court three others, making ten cases in the neighborhood this autumn." In the immediate vicinity there have been twenty-one cases of typhoid fever in all. The report states further that all this is due to defective drainage, and that before vigorous measures can be adopted to improve the sanitary condition of the city, the authorities must appreciate the dangers which are imminent. "This neither they nor the people seem to do." The nuisance remains the same, although public attention has been repeatedly called to it. All this refers to a locality in one of the oldest, most refined, and wealthy cities in the intelligent State of Massachusetts, of which Boston, the intellectual centre of the United States is the capital, and yet not even the barbarism of Central Africa could exceed this scene of human degradation and filth.

Of the city of Lowell in the same State the report says: "The system of sewerage in Lowell has always been imperfect. In many places there are no sewers at all, in others the pipes are of insufficient capacity or not low enough in position. There has always been great confusion as to their location, owing to the imperfection or absence of maps. Two years ago there occurred here, especially on Marion and Cross streets, an epidemic of typhoid fever. At that time and since then the sewage filled many of the cellars. On investigation a mass of filth was found which filled the entire calibre of the drain-pipe for some distance. This pipe was also found to be too small, and not low enough to create a current." These are not cited as exceptional cases. On the contrary, there is reason to suppose that the same state of things can be found to exist in almost every city and town in the country.

The responsibility for such a condition of things is not always due to ignorance; for unfortunately, while there are many people in this world who know too little, there are also some who know too much. There are quacks in every profession—quack doctors, quack lawyers, quack soldiers, and quack engineers—men who, having been gifted with an excess of conceit and cunning, use these qualities in the absence of more substantial ones, and succeed, by pretension to knowledge, in imposing upon credulous people. The city of London was for a long time victimized in this way. That city as we all know, has suffered terribly in the past for want of a proper system of drainage and sewerage. The plague carried off 100,000 people, and this was almost entirely due to defective drainage.

A new commission being appointed by Parliament nearly every year, each time just as they were arriving at a practical result, some person, generally a member or Commissioner, would bring forward a plan differing from all the others. This would prevent the adoption of any plan, and so it went on until the matter was placed in the hands of one man, Mr. Bazalgette, who has achieved wonders by simply adopting a comprehensive plan based upon common sense principles. Any attempt to carry out a plan not based upon the topography must necessarily end in failure.

When I speak of drainage, I do not include sewerage. Drainage and sewerage are entirely distinct and can seldom be combined, and then only to a limited extent. Drainage is the removal of the surplus water from the soil. Sewerage is the removal of water introduced by means of an artificial water supply, to which is added excrementations and other refuse matter which the force of the water conveys into the sewers. It follows that sewers should be conduits to prevent the escape of gases—while drains should be constructed as to admit of the percolation of water into them from the adjacent soil.

All that is necessary to do is to make the plan of the town conform, if only in a general way, to the topography of the surface. The streets and avenues may serve to facilitate. A system of drainage, and the most universal cause of disease is in a large measure avoided. It is imperative necessary that the streams and water courses should be preserved by underground drains, and also that lateral drains should be constructed to take up the water emanating from perennial springs. If this is not done in the beginning, when it can be done easily and economically, it will have to be done in the end, when the task is surrounded with difficulties, and at an enormous cost, when the safety of the lives of the people demand it, and after the pestilence and the graveyards have demonstrated its absolute necessity. The city of New York affords the most striking example of the errors committed in this respect and evils arising therefrom that can be found on either continent.

Surrounded on all sides by wide and deep water channels, having a well-defined surface, varying in height from five to 150 feet above high water mark, blessed by a climate of unsurpassed salubrity, it has, nevertheless, been ravaged by cholera and yellow fever, while the utmost vigilance is required to prevent the outbreak and spread of small pox, diphtheria, and the whole class of low fevers. All this is due in a very large degree to the fact that in laying out the plan upon which the city has been constructed the existence of a vast system of drainage streams was entirely ignored. Miles and miles of running streams, fed by innumerable perennial springs, permeate the original topography in every direction. Over these the streets have been graded, the intervening blocks blocked filled up, and acres of buildings erected, and beneath its undrained, saturated soil, giving off its damp, chilling, malarious atmosphere.

It is true that herculean and eminently successful efforts are being made by an energetic and wise Board of Health to remedy all this; but think for one moment of the task before them—the time, labor, easily discerned at the beginning. In one small district eighteen miles of underground drains have been laid down within the last three years, at an expense which would have drained the entire city in the commencement. Starting as all this city is, every city and town in the United States is following recklessly in the footsteps of New York, and in the end will pay the same penalties. Memphis, in mourning for her decimated population, repeats the sad story.

Newark.
North Ward National Bank
OF NEWARK, NEW JERSEY.
This Institution commenced business in 1873 as a bank of deposit and discount in the Rhodes Building No. 445 Broad St. Its prosperity, as indicated by its large list of depositors, which is constantly increasing, proves the necessity and wisdom of its establishment in this part of Newark. It is very conveniently located for residents of Bloomfield, Montclair and vicinity who may desire to have banking facilities in Newark.
